TO THE READER:

If you’ve read Food for Thought One, Pt. 2
<http://www.ericlarsen.net/foodforthought1.2.2007.html> (“U.S.A.—Land of Liars”), you’ll know that I've gone pretty vehemently on the attack against Matthew Rothschild of The Progressive magazine and Alexander Cockburn of Counter Punch on the grounds of their being "left" Gatekeepers—and particularly deceitful and dishonest ones, whatever they may, in the deepest part of their own private consciences, really think about 9/11.

As to the truth of that important point, we'll never know until, when, or if they tell us themselves. Until then, I think we ought to trust them, in Hamlet's words, as we would trust adders fanged.

When I wrote "U. S.A.—Land of Liars," I didn't know that Matthew Rothschild's <http://www.alternet.org/story/41601/> awful piece had also been posted on <http://www.alternet.org/> AlterNet.org, which had, furthermore, posted two additional anti-9/11 Truth pieces, one by <http://www.alternet.org/columnists/story/42181/> Matt Taibbi of <http://www.rollingstone.com/> Rolling Stone and another <http://www.alternet.org/story/37046/> by Joshua Holland. (And neither did I know that Taibbi had posted <http://alternet.org/story/41635/> an even earlier anti-9/11 Truth piece on Alternet.)

But now something very, very good has happened. AlterNet has decided to live by a higher standard than the craven and traitorous mainstream press and media, and has decided actually to look at both sides of what's unquestionably one of the world's three or four most important issues today. The AlterNet editor's decision to run Sander Hicks's "9/11: The Case Isn't Closed" is admirable and welcome.

<http://www.alternet.org/about/staff.html> He explains it this way:

Editor's note: The role of the alternative press is to offer perspectives that the commercial media won't touch. Having run a number of articles critical of the "9/11 Truth Movement" by Matt Taibbi, Joshua Holland, Matthew Rothschild and others, we asked Sander Hicks, a prominent voice within the movement, to share his perspective. For more of Sanders' views, see his book "The Big Wedding: 9/11, The Whistle-Blowers, and the Cover-Up."

And so there you are: A moment of professionalism, an act of courage, and a gleam of hope all at once! Allow me to express my great thanks to AlterNet—and, it hardly need be said, also to Sanders Hicks. And allow me also now to close my mouth after asking only that you all give a highly deserving read to Sander's excellent, capable, hard-headed, fact-based piece of research journalism.
